

From the Missouri Republican.
An Indian Feast.

Messrs. Editors—Permit me to make a brief notice in your columns of an interesting and somewhat musical scene that took place at that City Hotel on Saturday last. It is known that Geo. H. C. Melody is now in the city, with a party of Iowa Indians, designing to take them on a tour through the Union, and then depart with them for Europe. Last Saturday, a grand 'feast' was given to these Indian chiefs and braves, by their great father, Major Harvey, our worthy Superintendent of Indian Affairs, under whose sanction they now travel; and a number of citizens were present at the hotel, as invited guests, to witness the scene. Fine specimens of the red race now tenanted the wide plains of the west, could scarcely have been selected to give people abroad a true notion of what our Indians are. Mr. Melody has brought these chiefs from the present location of the tribe, on the Missouri, about five hundred miles above this city. The celebrated 'White Cloud' is the chief warrior among them; but the most remarkable and extraordinary personage of the party is Se-non-ty-yah, (the great medicine man,) the first of these singular Professors ever known to leave their nation under any circumstances.

The power of the "Medicine Men" over the minds of the Indian tribe, is one of the boldest and most curious features in the history of the children of the wilderness, and their supremacy among the Iowas is even carried to a larger reach than is known to exist with any other of the various divisions of these people. The earliest that is known of the race now distinguished as the Iowas, is that they were emigrants from Canada, settling somewhere upon Green Bay and near the head waters of Lake Superior. From there they wandered, pausing and occupying new hunting grounds from time to time, until of late years they have become identified with the region where their villages now stand. The chiefs selected by Mr. Melody and induced to travel with him, are the best formed and most intelligent of the tribe, and in Europe they will be the first genuine specimens of aboriginal America ever seen. Se-non-ty-yah is a being to arrest attention and excite wonder, if not awe, seen anywhere, and his countenance exhibits in a high degree that wild mystery and innate consciousness of power, ever the distinguishing trait of the "Medicine Men." They are the poets of the red people; and in them are concentrated all of romance, religion, history, antiquity, legend and prophecy, that enters into the vague preception of the Indian. The Medicine Man will go without food for days together, dance himself into phrenzied excitement, sink from it into breathless torpor, inflame his imagination into grotesque and wild sublimity, and in this state wield absolute control over the hearts and minds of his people. The Iowa, Se-non-ty-yah, is a noble sample of this curious class of Indians.

Culture of the Cucumber.

I will state a fact relative to the planting of cucumbers, which came under my observation, and which is worthy of being known. I shall at least give a further trial myself of its reality; though I cannot conceive there is a doubt remaining on the subject. Last spring, a friend of mine and myself were planting cucumbers at the same time. I was planting mine, as is usual in gardens, by mixing a small portion of stable manure with the earth, and raising the hill an inch or two above the surface of the ground. Observing it, he jokingly remarked, 'let me show you how to raise cucumbers.' Never having much luck in raising cucumbers, I cheerfully agreed to his proposition. He commenced at making holes in the earth at the distance intended for the hills, that would hold about a peck—he then filled them with dry leached ashes, covering the ashes with a very small quantity of earth. The seeds were then planted on a level with the surface of the ground. I was willing to see the experiment tried, but had no expectation of anything but a loss of seed, labor and soil. But imagine my astonishment, (notwithstanding a dryer season never was known, and almost a universal failure of garden vegetables,) when I beheld vines remarkably thrifty, and as fine a crop of cucumbers as any one could wish to raise, and they continued to bear an unusually long time. I will not philosophize on the subject, but say to all, try it! and instead of throwing your ashes away, apply them where they will be of use, and you will reap a rich reward.—Ohio Farmer.

Upon the foregoing, the editor of the Maine Cultivator says: 'We last season made trial of the above plan, and found it to succeed admirably.'

Democracy is open and above-board—it has no concealments, no design of entrapping the people. It has no ruse to catch the popular suffrage—it has no important design kept in the background, while songs and other frivolities are put forward as a forlorn hope to receive the fire of the enemy and conceal the real object of the contest. Democracy acts from principle, and asks nothing but to have the real difference that exists between us and our opponents clearly stated and distinctly presented before the people.—Wabash Standard.

From the Ontario (N. Y.) Messenger.
Decency and Religion.

As an example of the respect in which the whigs hold the memory of the lamented Harrison, we publish the following beautiful specimen from the columns of the National Intelligencer, a whig paper. It exhibits in glaring nakedness, at once their utter contempt of morality and religion, as well as their reverence for the memory of the object of their adoration in 1840. It will be recollected that in 1840 the whig party, under their idolized champion, Harrison, claimed for themselves exclusively all the "decency, morality and religion;" and yet, but three years have passed away, and while his memory is yet fresh in the recollections of the people, an advertisement is published in the columns of a whig paper, to gamble for his furniture. While the sod is yet fresh upon the grave which encloses his last remains, and while we have but just begun to realize that he has passed from amongst us, this sacrilegious profanation of his memory comes to us to heal the wounds which his death inflicted upon our hearts. Read the following from a whig organ, and judge who are the "moral, decent and religious!"

"Persons desirous to examine it before the Raffle can do so by calling at Concert Hall, over Lord's hat store, Pennsylvania Avenue, near Brown's Hotel.
"A gentleman will call on the members of Congress and the citizens generally for their names."
